Viacom | Cover Letter | Akash Kumar

With every project I do one of the first questions I ask myself is how will this be presented? More and more the answer is simple, video. I have created a lot of video in my time as a digital media student. Some of the work I am most proud of is on my website, akash.nyc. I do even more though. I built my whole site from scratch and all my projects boil down to programming. While I work mostly in python and javascript these days, I also have experience in other languages. I visited Viacom yesterday and I believed that I could contribute substantially to the work you do there. It was inspiriting to see a company embracing creative ways to use data in such a real way. I have always loved working at the intersection of software and design, I think we could create some cool stuff together. Let me know if you agree.
